June 19, 2018

9:00AM– 3:15PM Registration begins at 8:30AM

Supervision Skills in Social Services Supervision is much more than being able to assign work, conduct one on one individual conferences, or run an effective group supervision/case conferencing meeting. It also requires a thorough understanding of the differences between administrative supervision and a sound understanding of both clinical and training supervision; having knowledge of individual motivation (and de-motivation); knowing how to build effective relationships; setting and maintaining boundaries; giving effective feedback that is both clearly understood AND utilized by the supervisee/licensee; and having an understanding of how multi-cultural issues can impact the relationship and supervisory process.

Speaker

Ruth McMonagle MBA, MSW, LISW-S has been an independent trainer and consultant for over 30 years, specializing in management / supervisory training and increasing personal effectiveness. She is a lecturer, workshop facilitator, consultant and counselor. She holds a Master's Degree in Social Work and Business Administration. Ruth is a member of American Society for Training and Development. She is a licensed independent social worker in the State of Ohio.

Objectives

At the conclusion of this workshop, participants will be able to:

- Identify supervisor-worker boundaries and behaviors which are unethical and/or potentially illegal
- Define administrative, clinical and training supervision as defined in the ORC
- Know the importance of listening and observing to understand staff and know how to give developmental feedback to promote change and growth
- Understand the skillful use of questions and know the different kinds of questions that can be used in supervision
- Explore the physical, interpersonal cultural and psychological contexts of supervision and how they influence the format, structure, content and results of social work supervision
- Understand the dynamics of de-motivation and know the 4 factors for intrinsic motivation
- Define core competencies and clinical practice behaviors which are common to all social work practice
- Know how to document supervisory discussions and how to best utilize the CSWMFT Supervision log
