Domestic Violence in Later Life Researchers conducting the 2010 National Elder Mistreatment Study, published in the American Journal of Research, discovered that the majority of physical violence against individuals ages 60 years and older was perpetrated by a partner. The same study suggests that one in ten older adults experience one or more forms of violence, abuse, neglect, or exploitation. As 10,000 baby boomers turn 65 every day, it is imperative that protective service workers and their communities commit to meet the needs of older survivors of domestic violence and the relevance of compounded trauma. The intent of this workshop is to equip participating professionals with the information, skills, and strategies needed to improve identification of domestic violence in later life and offer survivor-centered, safety-oriented, and trauma-informed responses.

Speakers

Shelly Bell is the Family Systems Advocacy Specialist at the Ohio Domestic Violence Network. In this capacity she provides training and technical assistance on all forms of family violence (particularly child maltreatment, domestic violence in later life, animal abuse and the intersection of these with intimate partner violence) to domestic violence member programs, child welfare agencies and other community stakeholder organizations.

Shelly also acts as the Linking systems Project Coordinator at the Ohio Domestic Violence Network. She provides administrative, logistical and technical coordination for the coalition's contract for Project Management of the Linking systems of Care (LSC) for Child and Youth Crime victims.
